The feeling of Julius

By Jan van Cleeff

One of the more interesting hands of Session 1 in the Open Teams was board no. 2. Quite a few pairs bid all the way to six clubs, which happened to be an excellent slam.

The play looks pretty straight forward. On a diamond lead you first test the spade suit - after having drawn trumps of course. So you cash your three top spades and when the jack drops you are able to discard two heart losers from West on the spades from East. You simply give them the ♥A. Of course you could try to finesse ♠J either way but that is an inferior line of play.

With the actual lay-out the ♠J does not drop and therefore you fall back on finessing the ♥J (low to the ten), but with that card off side the slam still fails. As a consequence every declarer went down, with one exception however. Julius Sigurjonsson of Iceland still found a - legal - way to make 6♣. How?

After winning the diamond lead Julius stripped the diamond suit and cashed his three top spades, drawing trumps in the process. Then he played a heart to the King (!) . North won but was endplayed. He was forced to underlead his ♥J where a ruff and sluff would have given declarer his twelfth as well.

When asked why he played it this way the Nordic star modestly stated: "I followed my feeling."
