DOUBLE LEAD

The Castelli and Van Cleef teams are both leading the Teams Tournament. They have been virtually unstoppable. They both have 172 VPs.

The Castelli team (Maria Erhart, Jovanka Smederevac, Joerg Eichholzer and Christian Federer) has won almost all of their matches. They only lost yesterday eveningon Round 7. All the other matches were won by them.

The Van Cleeff team (Jan Van Cleef, Jon Sveindal, David Kendrick and Brian Senior) has a similar performance. They lost twice but their wins have been more expressive.

The Portuguese

Dream Team (Carlos Luiz, Nuno

on Vugraph

Matos, Rodrigo M Soares, Miguel Teixeira, Paulo Sarmento and Nuno Paz) are third. They are 12 VPs behind Castelli and Van Cleeff. They started yesterday with a tie, lost on Rounds 5 and 6 and then started winning 25-1, 20-10 and 25-1.

This afternoon everything will be decided. Castelli and Van CLeeff will fight all the way, others will too... Read all about it in Bulletin7.

Seven spades is cold - the play is a piece of cake. The problem however is how to bid the grand. In fact only very few pairs succeeded doing so, the Bulletin editors - Pedro Nunes (playing with Bjorn Oden) and Rodrigo Martins Soares (playing with Miguel Teixeira) being two of them, as Minouche Abee and Will Schilder, two lovely ladies from the Netherlands. I come back to that later.

Though several roads lead to Rome, most pairs had to take the same huddle somewhere in the process. Suppose the bidding develops like this:

North

South

2 ♥ (2/1 game forcing)

4 ♣ (shortness, agreeing spades)

4 NT (RKCB)

At this point South has to elect between two reasonable bids:

- 1. $5 \spadesuit$, showing 2 key cards and the trump queen. Nice, but North still does not know if an ace is lacking in seven spades or not.
- 2. 5 NT, showing 2 key cards and a void in clubs. Very nice, as North knows that in view of his six bagger the queen of trumps is likely not to be an issue anymore and therefore confidently can bid the grand (like Rodrigo).

However South can't be sure that North is in the position to judge that the trump queen is not so relevant. To solve this dilemma my partner (Jon Sveindal from Norway) suggests that after showing a void, North's next cheapest bid asks for trump queen if necessary. So after a 5 NT response 6 * will do the job (with the obvious answers of 6 or 7 *) and 6 * after a 6 * response (1 key card with a void).

Coming back to Minouche and Will. Their methods proved to be highly effective:

Quick surrender

By Rodrigo Martins Soares

Last night's session had some interesting boards. On one of them I was lucky that my opponents were tired enough to go down without putting too much of a fight.

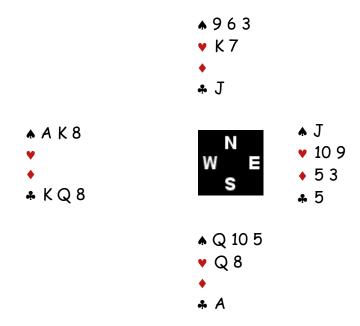

Board 5

West

After partners nice (?) Vul vs. Not lead directing opening bid, I duly led the ♥A. Looking at dummy I showed my alertness by switching to a trump. Now declarer just went through the motions before settling for 1 down.

But look at what happens if East cashes all his diamonds before giving in - this is the position:

Notice that North held on correctly to his three spades. Had he not, South would have been squeezed of his last heart on the last diamond and declarer could have simply played a club. But on the next diamond South will most probably discard a heart and now North has to be careful and discard his last Club, even knowing that South holds the Ace (or East would already have 11 tricks). If not declarer's 11th trick will be a Heart.

South could discard his spades earlier, but, with North being unable to give count directly in spades, it would be a big risk to let them go, as East may have held 2 spades. In that case the contract couldn't be beaten... but declarer might not know that and misguess the end position.

Would both me and my partner had been able to discard correctly? Let's just say I'm glad we weren't put to the test.
